Read what the people say concerning the ability of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil to cure asthma, catarrh, croup, colds etc. Mrs. Dora Koch of Buffalo, says: "For croup it is decidedly efficacious." [Mrs. Jacob Mellisor of Marion Ohio, says the same thing.] S. S. Graves, Akron, N. Y., writes: "I had asthma of the worst kind, took one dose of Thomas' Eclectric Oil and was relieved in a few minutes. Would walk five miles for this medicine and pay $1 a bottle for it." Druggist C. H. Hall, Grayville, Ill., says: "Cured an ulcerated throat for me in twenty-four hours." "Sat up in bed and coughed till the clothing was wet with perspiration. My wife insisted that I use Thomas' Eclectric Oil. The first teaspoonful RELIEVED me." E. H. Perkins, Creek Centre, N.Y. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is also a "Tip-Top" external application for rheumatism, cuts, scalds, burns, bites, bruises, etc. When visiting the druggist, ask him what he knows of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil; if he has been long in the drug trade, be sure he will speak highly of it.

HIS ERROR.

The farmer tips back in the old oaken chair,
His hand on his head and his feet on the stool;
And he dreams of the days when his prospects were fair,
And he worked all day in a grocery cool.

How he measured out sugar for Mary and Rose,
And liberties never once took with the till;
When he wore patent-leathers that ruined his toes,
When he called on Jemima, just over the hill.

He thinks of the days when they roamed through the glade,
And heard the shrill notes of the gay whip-poorwill;
When they dreamed of a neat little cot in the shade,
Of a button-ball hanging just over the rill.

He looks at these pictures through spectacles bent,
And Jemima he sees in a vision of bliss,
Just the same as she looked in the days when he leant
The wicket across for the tra-la-la kiss.

He thinks of the year's that he's worked over-alled,
With shovel, rake, harrow, plow, bean-pole and hoe;
He remembers the night to propose that he called,
And, oh, how he wished she'd only say No!

For then might his life be of idleness full,
He could loaf through the day-time sunshiny and bright,
And not have to larrup an old brindle bull,
And jerk up the turnips from morning till night.

But what is the use of his "bah" and his "pish,"
And what is the use of his sadness and woe,
And what is the use of his empty old wish
That he'd courted girls who could only say No!

WORDS OF ADVICE.

SOMETHING YOUNG MEN SHOULD READ.

The Late Edward Pierrepont—Extracts from a Letter Written Him by His Father.

The recent death of young Edward Pierrepont, Secretary of the American Legation of Rome, brings out a private letter ex-Minister Pierrepont wrote six years ago to his son at college. The deceased, says an intimate friend of the family, was a young man of rare gifts and accomplishments and of great promise. He was a brilliant scholar, a close student, a thoroughly upright Christian gentleman, and a manly fellow. He was educated at Oxford University, England, and died of Roman fever at the early age of twenty-five years, shattering brilliant hopes and rainbow promises. On march 8th, 1879, Mr. Pierrepont wrote the letter in question for the future guidance and help of his son. It was full of wisdom and rare discretion, and young men who read it will doubtless be inspired and strengthened by its teachings and guided by its counsels. We make the following liberal extracts from the letter:

MY DEAR SON—I would gladly save you from much annoyance and from many sorrows, by giving you the benefit of my own experience. I also know how prone boys are to think that the times have changed since their fathers were young, and that the true rules for the conduct of life have ceased to be the same. My son, as you grow older, you will find that from the time of Solomon to this hour human nature has not changed at all, and that the guide to a prosperous and a happy life is needed the same as it was when that wise man wrote.

First—There is a great first cause which rules the world; a something which we can but dimly comprehend, because it is too vast for our finite minds. It is the infinite. It is God. It is fruitless to try "to find out God." He is "our father in Heaven;" this is all that the simple child can know; it is all that the most learned man can ever know. That this Great Creator is just and merciful, and rules by equal laws, we have every reason to believe; and that it is one of the Creator's laws that our lives may be influenced by earnest prayer for guidance in the right way, there is no doubt.

Every day ask our Heavenly Father to guide you in all things in the way which is right, and you will not go wrong.

If sceptics wish to talk with you about it, don't argue; arguments on these subjects never do any good—you might as well argue that you loved your mother. Practice what I suggest, and you will know from conscious experience that what I tell you is true, and you will be made much happier and serener day by day, and far more prosperous in this world.

Second—That truth, unfaltering integrity, justice and honor are never to be departed from under any circumstances.

Without strict integrity, justice and honor, no one can have continued success in anything, or lasting respect from anybody. Everyone is found out sooner or later, and much sooner than he supposes. Indeed your true character is sure to be known, and sure to be justly appreciated.

I pray you, my son, never trouble yourself about popularity. Do right, the best you can, deserve respect, and you will be certain to have it.

Success comes not of spasmodic effort, but of continued every day work.

Read the fable of "the hare and the tortoise" and profit by its teachings, and remember that success with honor, is one of the highest pleasures of life. An idle life is a worthless and unhappy one.

Never go to balls and parties in term time, and avoid late wines and suppers at all times—they always injure the health, and without health life has scarce a pleasure.

From his birth, Sampson drank neither wine nor strong drink, and those who are trained for the ring imitate his example. During our late war, it was conclusively proved that those who drank water only escaped disease and endured fatigue far beyond the others.

If you drink wine at all, be very moderate; there is much in habit; a single glass is just as satisfactory as a dozen, if you so train yourself.

I cannot too strongly urge upon you the importance of early retiring to rest.

Third—That economy is a virtue and that extravagance is a vice, never forget.

You never see a man of forty who regretted his economy; you will see plenty who mourn their early extravagance. Lavish expenditure never wins respect. It may win temporary flatterers, who despise the fool they flatter. Pay every debt you owe, but

> Neither a borrower nor lender be,
> For loan oft loses both itself and friend.

Let not your vanity ever tempt you to spend money.

I would deprive you of no innocent pleasures; that is not pleasure which injures the health, jades the mind and makes you feel meanly and weak and unequal to the labor which is to fit you for manly life.

Duties well done every day and difficulties surmounted as they arise grow easier continually, and finally become lasting enjoyments.

Never play cards for money. It is no pleasure to win a fellow student's money, and it is pain to lose your own. The habit is always bad and oftentimes fatal; never acquire it.

Dress like a gentleman; never be peculiar or flashy, but dress as become you, not as becomes some one else. Never talk about your expenses or your money, and never be ashamed to live with economy; on the contrary, be proud of it. Your business now is to acquire knowledge, and you need not be anxious to display yours, especially to older men; but always try to learn of them.

Never say to another what it would be unpleasant to have him say to you.

Remember that good manners are of great importance. Manners should be frank and easy, with dignity.

Avoid fawning, toadying ways as you would the foul fiend. Never fawn to a prince or swagger to a peasant. Be courteous and manly everywhere and to everybody.

Let your manners be quiet; nothing is more underbred than a flurried address, with a face wrinkled all over with grinning delight.

You cannot have good manners in the drawing room, if your habitual manner is bad; the habit will betray you; let the habit be always good.

Sometimes you will be neglected, and your vanity may feel wounded; never let this annoy you; be absolutely sure that in due time all will come right and that you will have all the consideration which you merit. No one can do you any permanent injury but yourself. The world is so constituted that it is not in man's power to withhold respect from lofty character, reability and good conduct.

You may be invited to a ball or a dinner because you dance and tell a good story; but no one since the time of Queen Elizabeth has been made a cabinet minister or a lord chancellor for such reasons.

The years of youth are short, and the pleasures of youth perish in manly life. Reputation, power, and the consideration which comes of ability, attainments and good character are what the man from thirty to seventy covets. Nothing but the well spent years of early life can secure these.

I would keep you from no enjoyments suited to your age which are not injurious to your real happiness and your future success.

You have health and a good constitution, and you have no inherited tendencies to any vice. It is easy for you to do right, and it will be unpardonable if you go astray.

Remember that when you are twenty-five you will desire what others value at that age, and so at every future stage of life. I mean what the higher order of men value.

Live each year in the way which will best fit you for the next year, and thus you will lead a happy life; a life which will secure to you the happy life to come.

Feel always a manly pride that you are an American, and that your future is here.

I have a letter from the Dean to-day, in which he says "Your son's improvement has really astonished me." Continue to astonish the Dean and to delight me.

This shows that you have the ability, and that there will be no excuse and no pardon if you are not faithful in the future.

From time to time I shall hear from the Dean, and also from your tutor, and they will tell me all and only the truth. They will reveal your shortcomings, if you have them, as well as your merits. You accept too many invitations from your fellow students. This will weaken your energies and prevent your success, beside, you will become a bore, which avoid, as you would the "plague." Short visits do not bore.

When we last met you did not carry yourself erect. You seemed to think that you were awkwardly tall, and you tried to look shorter; this is a mistake. you are nineteen years old and scarce more than six feet high; that is not too tall—but if you grow to any height, carry yourself erect.

When you have done the duties of the day, and done them well, take your pleasures, which will be all the more keen, and when you have well finished the labors of the term, you will enjoy the vacation a thousand times the more by reason of your successful toil.

I do not need, in this letter, to repeat the warnings against those petty vices, temptations and follies of which I have so often spoken.

God bless and keep and guide my boy.
Your ever devoted FATHER.

Modern Authors.

A metropolitan writer commenting on the entertainment for the benefit of the International Copyright League, says: "The authors who have been reading at Madison Square Theatre are a curious exhibition in themselves. They are about as interesting to look at as their writings, read by themselves, are interesting to listen to. George William Curtis and Whitelaw Reid, though diametrically opposed in politics, and in the heat of last year's campaign often vigorously belabored each other in print, are warm personal friends, and are associated together in various clubs and also as State Regents. Henry Ward Beecher "hung his hat on the floor" of the stage just as he does in Plymouth pulpit. Age seems as powerless to wither him as conspiring slander was to injure his reputation a few years ago. Frank R. Stockton has a finer fancy than figure, and Mark Twain is not handsome to look upon, but you do not think of that as you listen to the fine, airy wit of the one and the broad humor of the other. Twain is much funnier when heard than when read only, his odd manner of delivery giving zest to his humorous writings. H. C. Bunner, editor of Puck and the writer of some very dainty verses, is petite in person and just a little dudish in appearance, but by no means so in manner, for he is hearty, blunt and enthusiastic. Two brothers more unlike than Edward and George Carey Eggleston it would be difficult to find, and they have little in common in their literary styles and tastes. George, who is not seriously religious, runs to heavy subjects and to moral discussion, while his brother, who is a minister, likes most to write novels and light fiction. I suggested to him the idea and the title of his novel, "The Circuit Rider," and he once told me that he was occasionally annoyed and at the same time amused at finding from his publisher that copies were often ordered by persons who wanted "Eggleston's Circus Rider." It was rather pleasant to behold these brethren of the mighty pen uniting in a joint entertainment for a common object without displaying the least particle of that jealousy which invariably accompanies every similar exhibition by actors. The contrast is creditable to the guild of authors and a good example for the actors.

Sunday Newspapers.

The last New York daily journal to issue a Sunday edition was the Graphic, and the event afforded a veteran journalist a chance to indulge in some reminiscences. I can very well remember, he says, when a Sunday edition of a New York daily newspaper was as great a novelty as the daily illustrated Graphic was when first started. There have been Sunday papers since away back in 1825, but they were issued only on that day of the week. I think the Herald about 1863 was the first to regularly issue on Sunday. The Tribune attempted about the same time, or at least some time during the rebellion, to issue a Sunday edition, its editor believing that the great interest in the war news would make the Sunday paper welcome. But the moral sense of the community was shocked, and Mr. Greeley abandoned the field. Only one other, and that a special Sunday issue, was published during Mr. Greeley's lifetime, and that was ordered by Mr. Whitelaw Reid without consulting either Greeley or Samuel Sinclair, the publisher. It was dated Sunday, September 4, 1870, and gave details of the fall of Sedan and the capture of Napoleon III. and McMahon's army, an event which the Tribune two days before had predicted as the inevitable end of the movement then making. I remember that Mr. Greeley wrote Mr. Reid, who was then managing editor, that this special issue was the best newspaper he had ever seen. "But," he added, "you ought to have got in that little editorial of mine on salt." But it was not until some years later, when he had become editor-in-chief, that Mr. Reid ventured to issue the Tribune regularly on Sunday. The conscientious opposition to Sunday papers has entirely disappeared.

HUNTING THE CONDOR.

NOVEL WAR DECLARED BY CHILIANS.

"The Chilian government has declared and is carrying on a novel war," said Cornelius W. Ryerson, of New York, who arrived home from South America recently, "and that is a war of extermination against the gigantic vulture of the Andes, the condor. The government issued a proclamation last year declaring the birds to be an enemy of the republic. Condors have increased so rapidly within the past few years all along the western slope of the great mountain chain which is their habitat that they have become by their foul habits a scourge that has increased the already sufficiently unwholesome character of the country. With the hope of exterminating them or greatly decreasing their numbers, the government in its proclamation, offered a bounty of $5 for every condor killed. A friend of mine who lives in Chili wrote to me that he believed there was a chance to make a great deal of money by engaging in condor hunting, and as I had several years' experience in mountain climbing and hunting all sorts of wild beasts and birds both in this and other countries, I went down there last fall to see what there might be in this condor hunting. Well, I was there five months, and after a persistent campaign against the condor with guns and traps I made up my mind that a man has got to be 100 per cent. smarter than I am if he ever gets rich on condor bounties, and that if the Chilian government expects to rid itself of its big winged outlaw it will have to detail every man, woman and child in the country to take up arms against it.

"The hunting of condors has been a regular business in the Andes mountains for many years, and the natives have made some money by it, but like all the vulture family, the condor grows suspicious and wary from contact with mankind, and it has grown to know and fear a gun so that it is next to impossible to get within gunshot of one. Snares are now the only means by which condors may be taken with any certainty, and they have learned to be on the lookout for them. These birds have the most wonderful powers of vision and flight of any living creature of the air. Perched on mountain peaks above the clouds, they watch the trails which mules and lamas follow with their burdens thousands of feet below them, and if an animal dies and is left on the plain, these monster vultures see it, and although no human sight can discover the presence of a single bird, in a few seconds' time they will be seen dropping down from the clouds like thunderbolts. Formerly the hunter took advantage of this swooping down upon the carcasses of dead animals by hiding within gunshot and picking off one or two condors before they could rise out of range. Traps were also set beside dead bodies of mules and other animals. But this can rarely be done successfully now, so wary has the condor become. The same wonderful eyes that keep the trailing caravan in view or discover the carcass left lying for its use, notes also the hunter hiding with his gun, or the trapper arranging his snare by the carcass, and the bird remains safely on its perch. To shoot it on the wing, unless you are fortunate enough to lie secreted near some lofty peak when the bird comes sailing through the clouds to seek it for a perch, is entirely out of the question, for it flies at altitudes such as no other bird attains. This lying in wait, however, far above the snow line for a chance to put a ball through a condor is something that requires more grit and nerve than the average hunter can boast, and consequently there are not many condors killed on the wing. These birds hatch their young among the snow-covered crags of the Andes, sometimes 12,000 feet above the sea, and the bird has been seen at an altitude of 20,000 feet. Once in a great while you may hear of some hunter bold enough to clamber to the nesting places among these crags in search of condor nests, as the capture of the young or the eggs is as profitable as killing a grown bird, but such exploits are few and far between. There are always two eggs in a nest, and, as there is nothing that ventures to makes the condor its prey except the hunter, when a condor makes its nest it does so with more certainty that there will be more of its kind added to the family in the course of time than does any other bird or beast. Traps are set as high among these nesting places as the hunter can dare to venture, and many of the birds are captured in that way.

"There is no more startling sight than from some snowy rock so high in the mountains that the clouds hide the world from your view to see one of these immense birds break suddenly through the dense vapor below you and sail upward with the broad sweep of its ponderous wings into the haunts where it dwells alone in the solitude. It seems like some winged demon daring to seek the realms of temperature beyond which human existence is impossible, and is at home among the snowy peaks of Chili and Peru as well as upon the burning sands of Patagonia. With a sweep of wing twelve feet in extent the swiftness of a condor's flight is such that it will sail out of sight, notwithstanding its great size, within the space of a very few minutes. It may with ease eat its breakfast in the northern Andes and twelve hours later go to roost among the peaks of the southern sea coast.

"If it were possible to get at the nests of the condor so that its eggs might be destroyed, there might be some chance that the outlawed bird would in time be exterminated, but the systematic scaling of icy peaks to the hight of anywhere from 12,000 to 18,000 feet above the ocean for the purpose of bird-nesting, even at $5 a nest, is not likely to ever come to pass. Poisoning of the birds might be made effectual, but unless some poison can be made so deadly that it will kill the bird as it stands over the carcase it is devouring, that means of extermination cannot be made practical. The hunter must produce the evidence that he has killed a condor before he can secure the bounty. That evidence is the bird's head. A poisoned bird would carry that evidence with him and die with it among inaccessible peaks. The poisoning of condors has been tried and was not satisfactory to the hunters. I am of the opinion that this bird has the quality of self-preservation developed too largely to make its annihilation even remotely probable. When the last South American dies there will be plenty of candors ready to devour his body if they have the opportunity."

What She Sang.

She had a voice like a siren, and when she sang—

'Mid play sure and pal aces, though beam a Rome,
Be it averre, oh wum bull there, snow play sly comb.
H, arm from theak eyesam stew wallow a sheer,

there wasn't a dry eye in the tabernacle, but if the program hadn't said in clear, unmistakable print that she was going to sing "Sweet Home," a man might have thought his teeth loose without ever guessing it.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The hunting dagger which belonged to Colonel James Bowie, and which has served as the pattern of all subsequent bowie knives, has been sent for exhibition to New Orleans. It is a formidable double-edged weapon, with a horn handle and a curved blade fifteen inches long and an inch and a quarter wide at the hilt. Like Dr. Guillotin Colonel Bowie unwittingly gave his name to an invention that has earned for itself a rather unfortunate reputation.

'SIAH PARTRIDGE.

How He Made His Reputation and Fortune—Not Such a Buckwheat As He Looked.

They tell a good story in the furniture trade of how Josiah Partridge rose to fortune and won the thousands of dollars that give him so conspicuous a place in business in New York. Mr. Partridge was, to all appearances, an unsophisticated, easy-going Yankee with no special ambition or purpose in life till he was somewhere between 30 and 40 years of age. At that time the Heywards, of Gardner, Mass., were the practical controllers of the chair business in New-England as they had been the trade's pioneers. Among their hands at Gardner was Josiah Partridge, or 'Siah, as they all called him. He was a hard worker, temperate, steady, and married. His wages amounted possibly to as much as a round dollar a day. The change in his life came about in a sudden, not to say a very funny, sort of a way. He had been barking a lot of logs in the factory yard at Gardner all through an intensely hot July morning. Along about noon he threw down his adze and leisurely perched himself in the shade of a friendly elm close beside the scene of his labor. There, bathed in a smile of satisfaction, he was discovered by one of his employers, who—it may have been the heat that made him unnaturally impetuous of speech—fiercely began to preach upon the contemptible meanness of eye-service. "What do you suppose we are doing, paying you for loafing, Josiah Partridge?" was the petulant demand. "Man and boys," retorted Partridge, "I've worked for you folks faithfully, Mr. Heyward, and if you get into such a passion for resting a bit on such a blazing day as this, why, you'll do it when I'm not around." Day after day passed and still Josiah Partridge put in no appearance at the Gardner shop. He had set himself down and reasoned out the secret of a new stride in successful chairmaking. When he fixed upon his plan he went quietly to the bank and drew out his saving, just $500. After that he was seen no more in Gardner. One year later some of the firms that had been struggling in competition with the wealthy Heywards began to receive letters from away up in the Vermont woods. These missives stated in effect that the expense of floating rafts of logs down to the Massachusetts factories, as was then the universal custom, with the stripping off of the bark, drying and sawing and planing, etc., might be done away with, and that one Josiah Partridge could send down frames all ready for finishing, guaranteeing that in one car he could pile up "more of these frames than a river full of big logs could ever be turned into" after their tedious and costly voyage to the Bay State. Trials were made, Josiah's offers accepted, and before the Heywoods had their eyes fairly opened rival firms about them were turning out goods at prices that were amazing. Then they too turned toward the forests to set up saw mills, but Josiah Partridge had his grip well fixed by this time, and that paltry $500 which a couple of years before had represented about all his wealth in the world had developed into big proportions. He had no lack of capital now; rich men, captured by his originality and his pluck, wanted to join him. He combined; his company went into manufacturing chairs out and out, and the fortune grew. He came to New York, and to look at the rich old fellow now you would never imagine that he was getting half as much fun out of his thousands as he probably got out of his quiet snooze that was so suddenly interrupted that July day so long ago.—N. VACCINATION.

How the Process Works in the Human System Subjected to Virus.

Pasteur had little difficulty, says Prof. Tyndall in the Popular Science Monthly, in establishing the parasitic origin of fowl cholera; indeed, the parasite had been observed by others before him. But by his successive cultivations he rendered the solution sure. His next step will remain forever memorable in the history of medicine. I allude to what he calls "virus attenuation." And here it may be well to throw out a few remarks in advance. When a tree or a bundle of wheat or barley straw is burned, a certain amount of mineral matter remains in the ashes—extremely small in comparison with the bulk of the tree or of the straw, but absolutely essential to its growth. In a soil lacking or exhausted of the necessary mineral constituents, the tree cannot live, the crop cannot grow. Now, contagia are living things, which demand certain elements of life just as inexorably as trees or wheat or barley; and it is not difficult to see that a crop of a given parasite may so far use up a constituent existing in small quantities in the body, but essential to the growth of the parasite, as to render the body unfit for the production of a second crop. The soil is exhausted, and until the lost constituent is restored the body is protected from any further attack of the same disorder. Such an explanation of non-recurrent diseases naturally presents itself to a thorough believer in the germ theory, and such was the solution which, in reply to a question, I ventured to offer nearly fifteen years ago to an eminent London physician. To exhaust the soil, however, a parasite less vigorous and destructive than the really virulent one may suffice; and if, after having by means of a feebler organism, exhausted the soil without fatal result, the most highly virulent parasite be introduced into the system it will prove powerless. This, in the language of the germ theory, is the whole secret of vaccination.

Bismarck's Private Fortune.

Prince Bismarck's private affairs, says the London Times, have just been investigated by the committee charged to purchase his ancestral estate of Schonhausen, in Altmark, as a national present to the Prince on his seventieth birthday. The revenue of the estate of Varzin, in Pomerania, (presented to Prince Bismarck by the nation in 1867,) is nearly £2,000 a year. The great forest property of Friedrichsruhe, in Lauenburg, was presented to the Prince in 1871. The timber on the estate brings in £4,000 a year and the farms about £1,200. The rental of Schonhausen is £1,000 a year. Prince Bismarck has erected extensive paper mills and manufactories both at Varzin and Friedrichsruhe, and these have proved very successful and bring him in nearly £10,000 a year. His annual income therefore is upward of £18,000, exclusive of his salary as Chancellor (£2,700 and allowances) and his pension of £450 as a former Minister of Lauenburg. The Prince is a most enterprising landlord and has greatly increased the value of his estates by judicious improvements. He is as "thorough" in the management of his private affairs as in his public administration.

A Royal Author.

Prince William, the eldest son of the Crown Prince of Germany, has written a book on "The Wars of Cæsar in the Light of Modern Strategy." The work is based upon a series of papers which the Prince recently read before the members of the Officers' Scientific Society at Potsdam; and it has been prepared for publication mainly in deference to the wishes of Count Von Moltke, who was present at the reading of the papers and was much struck at the correctness and originality of the Prince's observations. Among Queen Victoria's near relatives who are authors may now be reckoned the Imperial Crown Princess of Germany, the Duke of Edinburgh (who has written poems), the Princes Albert Victor and George of Wales, Prince William of Prussia, the Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein and the Princess Louise.

CHANFRAU AND ANDERSON.

Two Actresses Who Are Fast Friends.

Mrs. Frank Chanfrau has gone abroa with her youngest son and her siste Mary Baker, to visit Mary Anderson i London, and dispose of a melodrama b her late husband.

She and Miss Anderson have been grea friends ever since the latter went upo the stage; indeed it was at Mrs. Chanfrau's Varieties Theatre in New Orlea that Miss Anderson made her first succes. If all that occurred during that engagement could be told, how it would mak people stare and Miss Anderson laugh for, like a woman of genius, she is able t laugh in her hour of triumph over the fir follies of her inexperience.

Miss Anderson had played a week's engagement at the St. Charles Theatre before going to the rival house managed by Mrs. Chanfrau. A Miss Hunt of Louisville, Ky., a mutual friend of the tw actresses, induced Mrs. Chanfrau to g and see Miss Anderson as Julia in "Th Hunchback." She was on the stage a they entered, "and," and as Mrs. Chanfrau expresses it, "I was wrapt in admiration of the lovely voice which filled th whole theatre." When they reached the box, and Mrs. Chanfrau saw Julia in a black silk gown, high neck and lon sleeves, with her own hair swelled ou with jute switches and piled up over th top of her head in a towering mass and he eyes blackened above and below until the looked like two deep holes in her head she turned to Miss Hunt and exclaimed "Is this the lovely creature you have been raving about?" "The acting though was fine," said Mrs. Chanfrau, "and I was eager to see her off the stage. I went to her hotel the next morning, and when she came forward to meet me I was amazed and could scarcely believe it was the same girl I had seen the night before. I could not resist asking her who had taught her to 'make up' her face, and she said 'nobody, but that she had seen Edwin Booth make up once for Pescara' (a heavy villain), 'and she had imitated him in making up for Julia.'" The result, however, was that Mrs. Chanfrau made an engagement with Miss Anderson on condition that she should dress her and "make up" her face for each performance. Miss Anderson consented, and when she appeared at the Varieties she looked so different and so lovely that the audience did not recognize her on her first entry. When they did the expressions of admiration of her beauty were tempestuous.

Mrs. Chanfrau's conduct toward a sister artist in this matter was so handsome that all New Orleans rose up and acknowledged it. A benefit was given her on the ground of her kindness to a sister and a Southern actress, and the New Orleans Club took nearly every seat in the house. Towards the close of the performance an unusual compliment was paid her. The New Orleans Club, by an arrangement with the business manager, Clifton W. Tayleure, had the "snow boxes" in the flies filled with rose leaves, and as Mrs. Chanfrau stood in the centre of the stage bowing her thanks the boxes were turned and a shower of rose leaves fell about her until she stood ankle deep in them. The effect from the front of the house was said to have been lovely. "We gathered up three bushels of leaves from the stage," she added, after telling the story.

Lumbering in Michigan.

A New Yorker who was prospecting in Michigan last fall came across the manager of a saw-mill and bowl factory combined, and naturally asked him how business was.

"Well, pretty fairish," was the reply.

"In debt any?"

"Well, there's a mortgage on the saw-mill."

"Yes?"

"And we had to mortgage the bowl factory to pay the interest on the other."

"I see."

"And I believe there's a lien of some sort on the dam."

"Ah!"

"And the man who built the mill-race has a judgment of $600 against us."

"Anything more?"

"Well, the sheriff levied on all our saw logs yesterday."

"And then you are pretty nearly wound up?"

"Wound up! Why, my dear man, you don't know us western people. That's the way we always get ready to begin solid business!"

Training a Trotting Horse by Swimming.

Gen. John Turner, the horse trainer and driver, told a curious story to Robert Bonner, owner of Dexter, Maud S. and other famous trotters. "When I was a boy," said the General, "$200 looked as big as a million, and I had a horse matched against a pacer to go a single mile for $250 a side. In training him I discovered that through excess of action he hit his arms. I was in despair, when I was advised to try and put him into condition by swimming. Like a drowning man, I grasped at a straw. The river ran near my door. I hired a man to row me in a boat, while I sat in the stern and held the halter. We started up stream, and the horse swam beautifully. On the return he struck out eagerly, and actually towed the boat. I kept this up for ten days, and I never brought a horse to the post in better condition. The violent action in the water had given pliancy and firmness to his muscles and made his wind as clear as the ring of a bell. I won the race easily, but it is lucky that it was a single dash, because through his faulty action he cut his arms into ribbons."

How a Georgia Pond was Drained.

Albany, Ga., was ingeniously relieved of a troublesome nuisance in the shape of a stagnant pond of water, which covered from one to two acres. The city had a derrick and windlass erected near the edge of the pond, and put a force of hands to drilling a hole into the ground on the same principle that artesian wells are bored. The object was to find a subterranean stream or passage into which the pond could be drained. Such a passage was found at a depth of 33 feet, and then a square well was dug down to it, and curbed all the way. Everything being ready a ditch was dug and the water from the pond was turned into the well. It ran in through a 12 inch terra cotta pipe at the rate of about 600 gallons per minute, and disappeared as fast as it reached the bottom of the well.

Justice to George Eliot's Husband.

The publication of the "Life" of George Eliot, says the London Truth, has brought forth numerous biographical sketches of her husband, Mr. J. Cross, and in one of them, which has appeared in a great number of newspapers, it is asserted that his relatives "were strongly opposed to his marriage, and used all their influence to prevent it." This is pure fiction; there is not a shadow of foundation for any such allegations, which, of course, are most painful to Mr. Cross and his family.

Bound to Join Something.

The story is told that a certain man in Alabama desired to join the Episcopal Church. The rector questioned him as to his religious views, and finding he had no adequate idea of the obligations he was about to assume, advised him to wait until he had more fully studied the subject, whereupon the man turned away with the remark: "Very good; then I'll jine the Free Masons."

The Strawberry Crop.

News of a special nature from Suffolk county, N. Y., is in effect that the strawberry crops will be almost a total failure this year, the continued cold weather having killed many of the plants and destroyed the blossoms. The farmers have usually received $300,000 a season from this source.

Cambria Freeman.

EBENSBURG, PA.,
FRIDAY, - - - MAY 29, 1885.

THE Administration is industriously making hay, and it looks as if there would be a long spell of sunshine.

MR. HAY, First Assistant Postmaster General, returned to Washington from the South on Saturday last, and at once entered upon the discharge of his official duties. His health is much improved, and he says he has no intention of resigning. From this time on the country will have an opportunity for taking notes on the rapidity of his work in turning out Republican Postmasters and putting Democrats in their places.

No man makes money so fast as a member of the Legislature when he goes to Harrisburg on a free railroad pass at the beginning of the session and returns home at its final adjournment on the same pass, and is paid mileage by the State at the rate of twenty cents per mile both going and returning. If there is any other way of making money easier, or more handy than this, the man who succeeds in discovering it ought to take out a patent. His fortune will then be made.

CHRISTOPHER L. MAGEE, the Pittsburg boss, may be, and in point of fact is able to mould the present Republican Legislature into any shape he wishes, in order to carry out the personal aims of the ring he represents, but when he undertook to control the next Republican State Convention in favor of an obscure and unknown friend of himself, named McDevitt, for State Treasurer against Matthew S. Quay, he entered a very large field of corn with a very small hoe. This is quite apparent from the tone of the Republican press throughout the State, as well as from the action of several counties that have elected delegates to the Convention. Magee and Quay are both bosses of the worst type and so far as we feel any possible interest in the contest we are for Quay. He is a man of brains and in that respect has a big advantage over the Pittsburg statesman.

A JOINT Committee of the Legislature consisting of five members went to Pittsburg about three weeks ago, to take testimony in regard to the mental and physical ability of Judge Kirkpatrick, of that city, to discharge his duties as one of the Judges of the Courts of Allegheny county. The Committee was absent from Harrisburg about a week and has filed a bill against the State amounting to $1,061.63, which is at the rate of $212 for each member. The items of which this bill is made up, would, if published, make mighty interesting reading. Only one of them has been made public and that is a charge of $486 for mileage, or $99.20 for each member of the Committee. When it is kept in mind that they all traveled on their free railroad passes this mileage grab to the extent of nearly $500, is the most shameless display of rapacity that has ever been made by a committee of the Legislature. It is the lowest and the meanest way of getting money from the State treasury without any consideration, and yet we venture the prediction that it will be paid without a word of protest.

MAHONE'S Postmasters in Virginia are now being crushed between the upper and nether mill stone at Washington at a very lively rate. The President, who may be regarded as the upper stone, suspended as high as Haman ten or a dozen of them one day last week, and Malcolm Hay, First Assistant Postmaster General, who is the nether stone, and whose field of operation is much more extensive than that of Mr. Cleveland, rolled up his sleeves on Monday last, dismissed eighty-eight of Mahone's Postoffice henchmen and named their successors in office. More removals of the same kind will speedily follow until the entire Mahone crowd is swept away. Whatever necessary delay may occur in making removals in other States, Mr. Hay will take good care that not a single one of Mahone's appointees shall be permitted to remain. We don't believe that fair minded Republicans who are familiar with Mahone and despise his political methods, will make any serious objection to Mr. Hay's summary style in dealing with the dishonest gang who have aided and abetted Mahone in his piratical crusade against the inviolability of the public debt of Virginia.

A VERY important bill which passed the lower branch of the Legislature some time ago, passed the Senate on Wednesday of last week and has been signed by Governor Pattison. The vote on the passage of the bill in the Senate stood, yeas, 31, nays, 12. The bill permits defendants to testify in all criminal cases, and this is the first time that such a bill has run the gauntlet of the Senate, although frequent attempts have been made at former sessions to secure its passage through that body. Defendants are now competent witnesses in all civil actions as well as in criminal prosecutions for misdemeanor. Those who are opposed to defendants being examined as witnesses in their own behalf either in a criminal or a civil case, but especially in the former, have always alleged that the law permitting it opens the door to the wholesale commission of perjury. While this is no doubt true to some extent we have always believed that an intelligent jury in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, can tell whether a defendant is swearing truly or falsely. It is the most difficult thing in the world for a witness, whether a defendant or not, to invent and swear to a falsehood, without being detected and exposed by the undisputed facts in the case. The parties to a quarrel whether it was terminated by blows or whether it ended in a tragedy, in a homicide, are surely the best witnesses of all that occurred and therefore the most competent to tell it all to a Court and jury. A similar law has worked well in other States and we know of no reason why it should not do so in our own.

THE bill prohibiting the granting or receiving of free railroad passes, under a heavy penalty, was defeated in the State Senate on yesterday week by a vote of 13 yeas, to 18 nays. This result is not surprising for a similar bill has on several occasions heretofore been defeated in either the Senate or the House. Every member of the Senate took an oath at the beginning of the session to support the Constitution of the State, and that Constitution declares that "no road, railway, or other transportation Company shall grant free passes, or passes at a discount, to any person except officers or employes of the Company," and commands the Legislature to enforce the prohibition by appropriate legislation. No man of ordinary capacity can possibly mistake the plain meaning of the Constitution on this subject, and yet Mr. Biddis, a Democratic Senator from Pike county, claimed during the debate on the bill that every man had the right of a private interpretation. Biddis evidently took the oath to support the Constitution with a mental reservation. What earthly use have the people of this State for a Constitution which can't execute itself, if the Legislature, as it is required to do, refuses to pass the necessary laws to carry it into effect? It is an inspiring spectacle to see the Legislature treat the Constitution with contempt, accept free passes from the Pennsylvania Railroad, and when a Committee of its members goes to Pittsburg, as recently in the Judge Kirkpatrick investigation, learn that they each charged the State almost one hundred dollars for mileage, although they didn't pay one cent of fare. Free railroad passes cost the taxpayers of the State over one hundred thousand dollars at every session of the Legislature.

THE Lancaster Intelligencer says: The biography of John Kelly, the well-known New York Democrat, contains much of interest to the student of American politics for the reason that he was an actor in one of the most heated periods of American political history. Kelly won his maiden spurs in the days when native Americanism was at the zenith of its power. He and Bishop Hughes were the men who prevented the meeting of the native American leaders in New York, which had it occurred as intended, would, in the then excited state of public opinion, certainly have ended in wholesale bloodshed. Thus in fighting the battles of his faith and his race, young Kelly quickly climbed the political ladder, and sat in Congress for one of the New York city districts in 1854 when he was only 32 years old. He was one of the great moving spirits that led the bulk of the Whig vote into the Democratic party after and during the time that the latter party was waging its successful war against Know-Nothingism. It was then that the Alticks and other well-known local families joined the Democratic ranks. Voicing this exodus of the Catholic Whigs, Kelly said in a speech in Congress: "The large Catholic vote of Kentucky and Maryland had always been found with the Whig party, until the Know-Nothing monster and its protean brood of platforms drove them in self-respect, as well as in self-defense, into the ranks of the national Democracy, where they have found repose and peace under the broad shadows of the Constitution."—And under its shadows the great bulk of this vote still reposes.

THE United States Marshal for the Southern District of Iowa, Mr. R. Root, believes in the doctrine that "to the victors belong the spoils," and so believing, has tendered his resignation to the President in the following frank and manly letter:

KEOKUK, IA., April 13, 1885.

SIR: I have the honor to tender you my resignation as United States Marshall for the Southern district of Iowa, to take effect the first day of July, or as soon as my successor may be appointed and qualified. I tender my resignation, Mr. President, for two reasons, viz.: First, I believe that the Democrats of this district, who have worked night and day for the success of their ticket, with you at their head, while I did all in my power to defeat them and you, ought to be rewarded by receiving the offices within the gift of the Democratic party; second, I have been elected by my fellow townsmen of both parties to an honorable position of trust and profit and I shall accept the position. In conclusion, Mr. President, permit me to hope that the great God of this universe may give you health and spare your life and that you may rule over this great nation successfully for four years, and that at the end of that time a good, sound Republican may be elected to take your place. I am, Mr. President, your most obedient servant,
R. ROOT.

While every government office holder in the United States acted in the last Presidential campaign precisely as Root admits that he did, and while he resigns his office in obedience to the adverse fortune of political warfare, they, or at least the most of them, hold on to their places and seem to think they have a right to do so during their natural lives. Mr. Cleveland, however, is turning those out who won't resign as fast as the nature of the business will admit, and it won't be many months before the verdict of the people at the last November election in favor of "a change" will be carried into execution in every State, as all honest, candid Republicans admit it ought to be.

ON Friday last the House at Harrisburg spent more than half the time of the session in considering a preamble and two resolutions eulogistic of John A. Logan, and congratulating him on his re-election to the United States Senate. This Republican performance cost the taxpayers of the State about fifteen hundred dollars, which is nearly one-half the daily cost of the two houses. It requires a very lively imagination to conceive what possible connection there is between Logan's election and the duties which the members of the House were elected to perform. This Logan jollification was carried on in a House containing 141 Republicans to 60 Democrats, the latter, of course, being in too great a minority to prevent it.—And yet in view of this shameless waste of time on Friday and like action on scores of other previous occasions, Republican papers have the effrontery to charge the Democrats in the House with prolonging the session by unnecessarily consuming time. If a House containing a majority of 81 can't take care of itself it isn't fit to be at Harrisburg, and Republican organs shouldn't plead the baby act in its defense.

THE HOPE OF THE OPPOSITION.

It becomes evident every day that the Republicans are unable as yet to formulate a policy of opposition. As far as can be judged from the conduct of the party organs, they are puzzled and perplexed by Mr. Cleveland's Administration; and it is but natural that they should be. We notice that some of their more fair-minded journals are willing to give the Administration credit occasionally for honest purpose and performance, while journals of another class criticise it constantly and savagely, not on account of its actual shortcomings, but simply because they think it is Democratic. We doubt if this sort of criticism finds general approval or credence among Republicans, more especially among sensible business men.

We notice, too, that this disposition to assail the Democracy for its past leads some prominent Republican journals and leaders to attempt exciting the jealousy of the North by calling attention to the increasing influence of the Southern States and the number of important offices to which Southerners have been appointed by the Administration. A pretended fervor of indignation against "rebels" and "traitors" animates a few Republican orators and newspapers, but we do not observe that it animates anything else. The North is tired hearing Republican tirades about the wickednes, past, present and to come, of the South. It is most unlikely that Republicans put any faith in the efficacy of their attempts to revive sectional animosities. They would raise some other issue than that discarded one if they had any other to raise; but for the present they must be content to thresh over their old straw.

There was a hope among them that a quarrel about the offices might arise between the Administration and influential elements of the Democracy, and that then the Republicans might foment the quarrel by standing by the President. That hope must be getting fainter, as the Administration is getting more and more Democratic every day. As far as the offices are concerned, there is a growing probability of a contest between the Administration and the Republicans in the Senate next winter, and a lessening probability of a contest between the Administration and the Democrats. At least we hope so. It is supposed that trouble may come from stirring up the tariff question again, and here, perhaps, the Republicans may win an advantage and find an issue; but that depends upon the tariff reformers, and the moderation and sense of responsibility which ought to be expected from them now that their party has come into power.

But the quarrels or the mistakes of their adversaries must be the main hope of the Republicans. They are not likely to have any other programme than Democratic dissensions, and no device of their own will avail them if the Democracy keeps solidly together and carries out the administrative reform which is its pressing duty and the immediate need of the country. The Republicans have learned from defeat the necessity of making concessions for the purpose of maintaining substantial unity. Will the Democracy, which has owed so many defeats to its own folly, be wise enough not to abuse its triumph? Will the Administration remember that it can go without disaster no further than the rest of the party is willing to go? The country is fairly well pleased with the Administration at present, and the Republicans are at a loss in what way best to assail it. They are waiting for the Administration to furnish them with weapons.—N. Y. Sun.

ICEBERG IMPUDENCE.

Senator John Sherman at a recent political serenade in Cincinnati, pumped up an extra allowance of cant about election frauds:

"I think," said he, "the vilest crime in the catalogue of crimes, worse than any in the ten commandments—meaner than stealing, worse than burglary, as bad as murder—is to break down the elective franchise. A man may steal because of his hunger; he may commit other crimes because of some reason, but the man who cheats his neighbors of the right to govern themselves commits a meaner crime than any other that can be named."

We are glad "honest John" has been converted, because by virtue of his position and public career, in 1876, he was the leading instrument, after such vulgar scoundrels as Wells, Anderson, Kenner and Casenave, in making the Presidential theft a success. He advised and sustained these knaves of the Louisiana Returning Board in refusing the Democrats representation on the Board in the canvass of the vote, as required by law, and thus, during the whole count, there was a vacancy on the Board and the game of perjury and forgery went on unchallenged. If Sherman had said the Democrats should have representation in it, it would have been conceded. He refused. His part was to promote fraud, not to prevent it. Again, he gave a certificate of truthfulness to the negro strumpet, Eliza Pinkston, and flooded the North with her perjuries to inflame his party to the sticking point of standing by the theft of Louisiana's vote. She died in prison a convicted felon. In other ways not necessary to recount, Sherman promoted, advised and made successful the greatest election fraud of history—he was chief agent in a crime he now whines to the people of Cincinnati is the worst and meanest in the catalogue. Of course it is, and therefore Sherman is the meanest and guiltiest of the lot of "visiting statesmen," because his power was greatest. He gilded crime with moral maxims in Louisiana just as he is throwing dust in the eyes of the Cincinnati people. He exacted his price too, from the miserable tool the crimes he made successful put in the Presidential chair, and Hayes got a receipt in full when he made Sherman Secretary of the Treasury. The devil quoting scripture and John Sherman denouncing crimes against the elective franchise, are parallel instances of superlative and superhuman impudence.—Pittsburgh Post.

THE CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY.—The council of Catholic prelates who met in Baltimore recently for the purpose of selecting a place for the new Catholic university decided that it should be built in Washington, D. C. Although the Catholics of other cities, notably Philadelphia, offered very large monetary inducements towards securing it, the fact that Washington possesses the National museum, the Congressional library and other advantages, and is fast becoming a literary and scientific centre, caused the prelates to decide in favor of locating the university at the Capital.

Rev. Dr Chappelle, of St. Matthew's church, who was selected as one of the trustees, and who was among the foremost to urge the claims of Washington to the university, on Sunday made a strong appeal to his congregation to contribute at least $50,000 to endow a chair in the proposed university.

The institution will be of the highest order, and will not interfere with the work of colleges that impart only a secondary education. The ground for the building has been secured, and building operations will begin early next spring. The location of the university will be adjoining the Soldiers' Home, about two miles from the city.

It is a piece of ground known as the Middleton estate, contains sixty-five acres, is well wooded, and on it is located the spring that supplies the Capitol with water. The price paid for the ground is not stated.

Liberty Enlightening the World.

This new Wonder of the World, which is now being loaded on the French transport Isere for shipment to this country, is the largest statue in the world. Some idea of its magnitude may be obtained from the fact that 43 persons found standing room within the head. A six foot man standing on a level with the lips only just reached to the eyebrow. While workmen were employed on the crown of her head they seemed to be making a huge sugar-cauldron, and they jumped with ease in and out of the tip of the nose. Fifteen people might sit round the flame of the torch, which elevation can be reached by a spiral staircase within the outstretched arm.

The London Daily News, in speaking of it, says: "It is out and away the largest statue of modern times. The Colossus of Rhodes was nothing to it. It would carry the 'Bravaria' or the 'Hermann' in its arms. It towers to the skies from the yard of the Rue de Chazelles, where it has been eight years in construction, and the view from its coronet sweeps clear of the six-story houses and beyond the walls of Paris."

The weight of this stupendous statue is 440,000 pounds, of which 176,000 are copper and the remainder wrought-iron. It is expected to arrive in New York about the first of June, where it will be erected on Bedloe's Island, this being the location selected for it by Gen. W. Sherman, who was appointed by the President to make the selection. When placed in position it will loom up 305 feet above tide-water, the height of the statue being 151.2 feet, that of the pedestal 91 feet, and the foundation 52.1.

This imposing statue, higher than the enormous towers of the great Brooklyn Bridge or the steeple of Trinity church, which is the loftiest in the city of New York—higher, in fact, than any of the colossal statues of antiquity—by its rare artistic proportions, as well as by its stupendous dimensions, will add another to the Wonders of the World. A word should be said of its artistic merit. The pose, stride and gesture, with its classic face, are pronounced perfect; the drapery is both massive and fine, and in some parts is as delicate and silky in effect as if wrought with a fine chisel on the smallest scale.

The conception and execution of this great work are due to the great French sculptor, M. Bartholdi, who has devoted eight years of his life and most of his fortune to this great work, and whose generous impulses, which must be on a scale commensurate with this noble work, prompted him to make such a gift to the United States. The committee in charge of the construction of the base and pedestal for the reception of this great work are in want of funds for its completion, and have prepared a miniature statuette, an exact counterpart of the original, six inches in height, the figure being made of bronze and the pedestal of nickel silver, which they are now delivering to subscribers througout the United States for the small sum of one dollar each. Aside from its being a lasting souvenir of this colossal statue, it will ornament our homes and bear testimony that we have contributed to the completion of one of the grandest works of modern times.

A FRAUDULENT BUREAU.—It cannot be possible that an intelligently and honestly conducted agricultural department connected with the Government should not be productive of beneficial results. The farming interest is so vast, and there is such a scope for improvement in agriculture, that if properly directed the operations of a department devoted to that object would be of very great value. But so far the Agricultural Bureau at Washington has been productive of nothing but the disappointment that results from failure and useless expense.

The impression was quite general that, as managed by Dr. Loring, the bureau was inefficient in its operations and entirely too expensive for the amount of good it was doing. But it was not known how thorough[illegible] fraudulent was the pretension that it co[illegible] to the improvement of ag[illegible]. Since there has been a change in its supervision the fact has been divulged that its chief object was to spend the appropriations made to sustain it, with a regard more for the personal benefit of those who had the management than for the promotion of agricultural interests.

Large amounts of money were squandered on worthless seeds purchased from favored parties. These frequently were of such questionable varieties and poor quality that they were more of an injury than a benefit to those who used them. The sorghum mania that took possession of Commissioner Loring absorbed thousands of dollars which might have been put to practical use, while much of the annual appropriation was wasted on experiments which were criminally impractical if those engaged in them were endowed with ordinary sense. The object was indirectly to use the money to the best advantage of those who had the handling of it. Nearly three-quarters of a million was appropriated annually to the maintenance of the bureau, but ignorance, pretension, speculation, favoritism and downright dishonesty so prevailed in its management that not a quarter of the amount was properly expended.—Harrisburg Patriot.

CORN FED CARP.—The West Chester Local News says: A gentleman, formerly a resident of the southern end of the county, but now living in York county, has a carp pond which is about an acre in size, in which he put a very few carp two years ago. He has now over 8,000 young ones, and the old ones are, to use his expression, as large as a small man; and he thinks would weigh about fifty pounds each. The carp are so tame that they will feed from his hand, and they will come up like a platoon of soldiers to get their rations, which consists of sheaf oats and ear corn, the carp doing their own shelling. He has to tie the sheaf of oats to the bank in order to keep the fish from dragging the straw into the pond.

The Reputation of a Standard Article is seldom injured by surreptitious rivalry. Imitators of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters have not only lost money by attempting underhand competition with it, but have actually contributed to enhance the estimation in which the genuine medicine is held. The public at large has for many years been acquainted with the ear marks that distinguish the real from the spurious, and cannot be persuaded that other articles sold in a somewhat similar guise are equally good. Fever and ague, constipation, dyspepsia and liver complaint are not curable, by cheap local bitters, eye openers and tonics, but the fact is too well proven and too generally known to admit of conscientious dispute, that for these and other maladies the great household medicine is a safe and thorough remedy.—Not only in the United States, but in Mexico, South America and the West Indies, its merits are widely recognized and its reputation too firmly established to be shaken.

Attention, Doctors.

Everybody knows that the life of the average physician is a hard one. He is often compelled to ride great distances through mud and rain for a merely nominal fee. It is not fit nor proper for us to condemn any physician for his work, but we do assert that his practice can be made easier, and he can effect more cures by the judicious use of Peruna. If he will only add this great remedy to his medicines, his usefulness will be greatly increased. Full directions for its use will be found in the "Ills of Life," and he should at once procure this valuable book. Read the following:

CHILLICOTHE, O.
DR. HARTMAN: Peruna sells very well here. I have ordered several lots since you were here. It is a fine remedy.

—The time is close at hand when the sun may come where he is not wanted. You can keep him out by obscuring your window with a mixture of one ounce of gum tragacanth in the whites of six eggs, well beaten. A delicate tint may be given with any of the analine dyes. It can all be washed off when you choose.

—There is every indication that the coming summer season will find our town full of summer visitors, who will spend the summer here for the benefit of their health. —We have received a letter from Mr. Julian Donahoe, of St. Augustine, for publication, in which that gentleman withdraws the notice published last week cautioning persons against trusting his wife on his account. Mr. Donahoe says he is sorry that he published the notice, and that he should not have done so. We have mislaid his letter and up to the time of going to press have not been able to lay our hands on it.

—There is no nickel in a cent piece. The alloy used in making that coin is composed of 95 per cent. of copper and 4 per cent. of tin and zinc. Its intrinsic value is about one tenth of a cent. The report that counterfeits are in circulation is doubted, as the profits would be too small.

It is said that sugar is steadily moving upward in price. It is now worth from five-eighths to three-fourths of a cent a pound more than it was six weeks ago, and in foreign markets is from 1¼ to 1½ cents higher. The cause assigned is the falling off in the production in France and Germany.

—An order has been issued requiring all enginemen on helpers on the east side of the mountain to continue their run to Conemaugh, and all enginemen on helpers on the west side to run through from Conemaugh to Altoona. Heretofore Altoona helpers only ran to Gallitzin, and helpers on this side stopped there also.

Twenty three of them are for graves in cemeteries in the neighborhood of Wilmore, and the balance of them are for graves in the cemeteries of Johnstown and vicinity. —Professor C. V. Riley, the entomologist of the Agricultural department, says that this country will soon be visited by two broods of locusts, of the seventeen and thirteen year varieties, and that this will be the first time in 221 years that they have appeared in conjunction. They will not prove very destructive, and the injury they will do will probably be confined to fruit trees. The visitation will be prolonged until late in the fall.

—One way of catching moles is thus described; Take two old cow horns and place them point to point, turning the hollows outward in the track of the mole, and then replace the earth over them. The mole will come along soon and crawl into the horn as far as he can go, and remain there trying to get through, as he cannot turn round, and moles never go backwards. Scratch up and examine your horns occasionally, and you will soon have your mole.

—How young old people look who have never been seriously sick, and who never worry or fret. How old young people look who fret and stew and suffer pain all at once. But we can't altogether help our disposition, and we will sometimes get out of sorts in spite of all our caution. Then we need the best, the simplest and the safest medicine known, which is Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. Purifies the blood and renews vitality in old and young.

—Two young men from this place, on Saturday last started on a trip with Loretto as their destination, but when they had got about half way the horse ran off, throwing them out and wrecking the buggy. The horse and part of the harness made the trip to Loretto, but the young men and the buggy were left along the roadside. The buggy was pretty badly used up, but the drivers escaped with a few scratches.

—It is not generally known that the man who refuses to pay for his newspaper can be prosecuted like an ordinary criminal for theft. A New York paper has begun suit against several delinquent subscribers under the U. S. Postal laws, which say, "the taking of a newspaper and refusing to pay for the same renders a person liable to a criminal prosecution for a theft, and the person guilty of the same can be punished as if he had stolen goods to the amount of the subscription."

—Mr. Sifers, a farmer living near Dudley, Huntingdon county, was herding his cows, when a neighbor's bull which had broken bounds, suddenly charged and tossed him. The bull was coming at him again as he lay on the ground when two of his cows rushed in and stopped it, thus enabling Mr. Sifers to rise, which he did with difficulty, and make his escape. He is in the habit of treating his cows kindly, and some of them show much attachment to him. He says their promptness in facing the bull saved his life.

—We have been favored with samples of the celebrated Spencerian Double Elastic Steel Pens, and after trying them feel justified in highly commending them to our readers. They are made of the best of steel and by the most expert workmen, and have a national reputation for certain desirable qualities which no other pens seem to possess in such great perfection. Among these are uniform evenness of point, durability, flexibility and quill action. So popular have they become that of the "Number One" alone, as many as fourteen millions are sold annually.

—The water mains along Julian street, Centre street, and High street between Centre and Julian are now repaired and in good condition. The main on High street, west of the connection at Julian, burst on Tuesday evening just opposite the residence of Deputy Sheriff Blair, and in a few minutes that gentleman's cellar was flooded, and it will be several days before the pipes can be repaired. There are several leaks in the main running east on High street from Centre, and workmen are now engaged in making the necessary repairs.

—The Johnstown Tribune, of Tuesday, says: Samuel Reighard, aged about eighteen years, met with a serious accident in the Rod mill of the Cambria Iron Company about 1 o'clock this afternoon. A knot formed in a rod, and he was engaged in undoing it, when the reel boy "gave a jerk" and cast a loop over Reigeard's right foot. The red-hot wire encircled the ankle and burned through the flesh into the bone, causing a terrible wound, from which young Reighard may never fully recover. He was taken to the office of Dr. W. B. Lowman in a carriage, and his injury was there dressed, after which he was taken to his home on Lewis street, Millville.

—Gov. Pattison vetoed the bill authorizing officers of turnpike and plank road companies to sell or abandon any part of their road, with the consent of the persons holding the larger amount in value of the stock, to city, town or borough authorities. His objections are that it authorizes a sale without providing for the payment of the debts of the company and without calling a meeting. "To confer the privilege," he says, "is an anomaly on present laws and opened the door to serious wrongs upon creditors and stockholders. The present laws were amply sufficient, and if ineffective can be amended, but judicial supervision should not be abolished."

Notes From the Mountain Top.

Ebensburg, the county seat of Cambria county, Pennsylvania, is located on one of the lofty spurs of the Alleghenies, its physical horizon being, thereby, much wider than most other places and if the writer may judge from the interest manifested in education, its mental horizon has also much wider scope than most other places. A very excellent summer school is being conducted there at the present time by Superintendent Strayer and Professor J. W. Leech, gentlemen of high culture and literary attainments. There are enrolled in this school one hundred and eight students, divided into three classes—a preparatory class, a normal class for teachers, and a professional class composed of those applying for professional certificates. The entire school is pervaded with an air of dignity, interest and zeal that speaks volumes in its favor.—On the afternoon of the 13th the school had Arbor exercises in front of the school building and planted six Norway maples along the sidewalk facing the school edifice. The maples had been ordered and purchased by Superintendent Strayer. The trees were named respectively Longfellow, Byrant, Taylor, Higbee, Cary Sisters, and Holmes.—Local News

A case of malpractice occurred at Indiana on Thursday last. A widow named Subort had been under the care of James M. White, who claimed to be a physician, but who was for many years a blacksmith, and who has no diploma. On Thursday afternoon a son of the widow called upon Drs. Thomas St. Clair & Son, who visited the sick woman and found her dying from an overdose of morphine. White was present, and when Dr. St. Clair told the friends assembled that the patient was dying, White said she had threatened to kill herself. She died about 7 o'clock in the evening, and an inquest was held on Saturday. A post mortem was held by Drs. St. Clair & Son, when other evidences of malpractice were discovered. An information was made against White and he is under arrest.

Death of Mr. Richard Nagle.

Richard Nagle died at his his home at Baker's mines on last Saturday, his death resulting from injuries he received on the previous day by being caught between a car and a heavy piece of timber at the tipple of the Delaney mine, in Dean township. The deceased was sixty years of age, and leaves a wife and twelve children to mourn his sudden and untimely death. He was a brother of Mr. Michael Nagle, a former well known citizen of Carroll township, this county, who now resides in Altoona. His remains were interred in St. Patrick's cemetery, Gallitzin, on Monday, morning. May his soul rest in peace.

Sawmill Burned.

On Friday morning last the sawmill of Mr. Caron Leahey at Lilly's was discovered to be on fire about 4 o'clock, and in a short time after the discovery was entirely destroyed. Mr. Leahey's loss is estimated at about $1,000, on which there was no insurance. Mr. Leahey had an insurance policy of $800 on the mill, but the policy had expired two days before the burning.

THREE WEEKS DOWN SOUTH.

"Traveler" Describes His Trip to the Mammoth Cave.

Nothing more readily induces a contrast between the Northern and the Southern States than a comparison of the Falls of Niagara with the Mammoth Cave. They are both in their way, admittedly, the greatest natural curiosities in the United States,—or, indeed, in the known world. And it is not easy to say which is the greater wonder, Niagara in its awful majesty or the Cave in its profound mysteries:—The former in all its sublime attributes is palpable and taken in at a glance; the other in its mysterious labyrinths requiring weeks of exploration.

Yet Niagara is surrounded by a net work of railroads—the river spanned by suspension bridges—a thriving young city growing up in its immediate neighborhood—palatial hotels and summer resorts abound—in short it is the Mecca of the Northern States; and an adult don't like to admit that he has never visited Niagara. Nay, were now the Empire State, in which this wonder is only partially located has initiated the means for making the falls with all their surroundings and vicinity a public park—free to all!

Behold the difference! The Mammoth Cave is situate in Edmondson county, Ky., near its eastern boundary. The counties into which the Southern States are divided, are much smaller than in the North. Edmonson is a small county—a corn and tobacco county—of some 5,000 inhabitants,—its county seat Brownsville, with some 250 inhabitants, some 11 miles from the Cave.

Traveling by the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, after crossing Green River a few miles above, we arrived at "Cave City," at about 3 p. m. The city consists of four houses, one of which was our rendezvous.

From this point the fare is two dollars to the cave and return; the distance some nine miles, passing through the counties of Barren, Hart, and Edmondson. The land is rolling and in its appearance resembled the country in Western Pennsylvania; as it did also in the character and growth of its timber. Comparatively little of the land was cultivated, and even that was wretchedly farmed.

The road was the worst I ever travelled. Where it was not steep and rocky it was a swamp and the drivers took through the open woods. At one point on our return the teams were all abreast or nearly so, in the woods, each trying to head the others into the main road;—the passengers, ladies and all cheering their respective drivers. All this too on Sunday morning.

A pleasant young Methodist clergyman was of the party, and he could not resist the good natured rivalry. We met him frequently afterwards and always found him pleasant while his whole demeanor was always in conformity to his sacred calling. He took down in his tablet the names and additions of the whole party.

The drive became wearying. Our African John had destroyed three saplings on his team and had cut a fourth. I sat in front with him and sought information; but he was the most stupid negro I ever met. At length I asked him, "Are we ne near the cave yet?" His answer was, "Wen we get past the hill t'other side of the other one, de boss will meet us and tote our plunder in." Another reminder of our destination was that at each log cabin we passed little barelegged Africans would hail us with shells, flowers, etc., all of course from the Mammoth Cave!

We reached the "House" about five p. m. and soon after had a plain country supper. There were 27 at table—all candidates for the Cave. The building is a queer, antique-looking structure: a temperance house, there being no licenses granted in Edmondson county. We had two waiters at our table—one a youth of some twenty, (white,) and not less than seven feet high—the other older but about the same altitude. I may say here of the house, that though homely it was clean and comfortable—the landlord polite and fairly intelligent, and the charges not too high.

The descent into the cave was, as it uniformly is, at seven o'clock and the agent occupied his office preparing and issuing tickets. He issued none for the "long route" as that route is impracticable after the spring rains. But there is a "short route" and a "shorter," for which tickets were respectively three and two dollars. We took the latter as it corresponded with our ability to travel, as well as our finances.

Then there was a flutter of preparation. Our number was 27, one-third ladies. Many of the parties, especially the ladies had a prepared wardrobe for the Cave; but the agent demonstrated their uselessness; and recommend low hats and a cane for each visitor.

Thus equipped and with some dozen lamps we followed our guides to the mouth of the cavern, some two hundred yards distant.

But here I must take a long breath. I am as reluctant to enter upon the details of our visit, as I was to enter this fearful chasm on this Saturday evening. So I shall defer the exploration till my next paper.

TRAVELER.

Highway Robbery at East Conemaugh.

Two young men, residents of this city, who had been in attendance at a dance in Custer's Hall, Franklin borough, were handled pretty roughly on the Pennsylvania railroad, opposite the high bluff, on Saturday night, between 11 and 12 o'clock. After leaving the hall they crossed the railroad to Confer's saloon, where they drank some beer. Soon after taking their departure from the saloon two men called to them, saying: "Hold on, we are going to town, too." The strangers walked along with the young men, chatting pleasantly, until reaching the bluff. At that point one of the strangers, without saying a word, struck one of the young men a stunning blow, felling him to the ground. The other young man was then thrown down and every pocket in his clothing rifled. His companion was similarly searched, and the strangers then made off. The only plunder of any value obtained by the robbers was an open-faced silver watch, worth about $25. The robbers are supposed to have been tramps, and there is no clue as to their identity.—Johnstown Tribune.

AN INTERESTING LETTER.

From Mr. Harry W. Olmstead, Proofreader of "The Times."

The following letter is encouraging and worthy of careful perusal, coming, as it does, from so reliable a source, unsolicited. It contains facts of great value:

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 12, 1884.

DR. DAVID KENNEDY, Rondout, N. Y.

DEAR SIR:—For ten years I have been a sufferer from disease of the kidneys, at times so much so as to make life a burden. During this time several of the best physicians in Indiana have treated me with little or no success, until I had almost despaired of relief. I then tried several advertised remedies, but nothing produced the desired result until a friend who had been relieved induced me to give DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY a trial. I did so. After taking one bottle I began to experience relief. I took another and was charmed with the result.—In all, I have taken four bottles, and can truly say I feel like a new man. I am confident I am entirely cured, as it has been several months since I took the last medicine, and there is no indication of a return of the disease. I have recommended your remedy to several suffering friends who have also been relieved. I write this to return my sincere thanks to you for the cure which has been effected in my case, and also desire to say I think suffering humanity owes you a debt of gratitude for your wonderful scientific discovery. I shall do all that in me lies to let all sufferers know where they may find relief, and thereby in some measure remunerate you for the good you have done me.

Wishing you long life and prosperity, and also thanking you for prolonging my life, I am

HARRY W. OLMSTEAD.

Dr. Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., assures the public, by a reputation which he cannot afford to forfeit or imperil, that the "Favorite Remedy" does invigorate the blood, cures liver, kidney and bladder complaints, as well as those diseases and weaknesses peculiar to females.—Your druggist has it; if not, send One Dollar to Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

FARM NOTES.

A Massachusetts poultry fancier recommends knit hoods for covering the combs and wittles of black Spanish fowls.

It is not necessary to keep cocks unless the eggs are intended for sitting hens. The hens will lay just as well, perhaps better, and the eggs will keep a longer time.

Rats have a great aversion to the odor of the chloride of lime, and, when mixed with water and poured into the holes through which the rats pass, they usually vacate their haunts. This mixture is harmless, does not kill the rats, but drives them away.

A solution of India rubber in benzine has been used for years as a coating for steel, iron, and lead, has been found a simple means of keeping them from oxidizing. It can be easily applied with a brush, and is as easily rubbed off. It should be made about the consistency of cream.

Here is a new English remedy for crib biting. Nail a strip of sheep skin about eight inches in width, the entire length of the crib; select a skin covered with long wool, and sprinkle it freely with Cayenne pepper. Renew it occasionally, and the worst cribber can be persuaded to desist from his habit.

The small streams which often flow through farms are almost invaluable sources of fertility, if the mud which accumulates in them every year is cleaned out and spread upon the land. All the leaves, together with the fine mold from cultivated fields, find a lodgment in the bed of these streams. Several loads of manure as valuable as that made in stables may thus be secured every year.

A farmer whose neighbor's stock has been driven to his well all the last winter made a calculation that the loss of time in driving stock, to say nothing of loss from insufficient supply of water is enough to pay the interest on fifty dollars easily. Yet a good well could be put in the barnyard with wooden pump for less than half this sum. The loss of manure from driving stock far for water in winter is a serious item.

The old practice of putting ashes in leach to make soap is less common than formerly among farmers. The ashes are worth more as a fertilizer to crops than for soap. Good potash can be bought more cheaply than in the form of ashes, and it is not in as good shape for applying to crops. However, there is still much virtue in leached ashes, and where they can be got cheaply they will well pay for hauling on sandy land.

The milk from heifers is neither so large in quantity nor so rich as that from the same cow as she becomes older. The old rule which reckoned a heifer with her first calf as equal to half a cow was not far from right. The growth of the heifer is so much deducted from what would otherwise go to milk production, but with young cows capable of eating and digesting an unusual quantity of food a larger proportion may go to the milk pail.

In answer to the question, what is the best season of the year for pruning a young orchard? the Country Gentleman says: Late in winter, or early in spring before the buds swell, if you wish to maintain the vigor of the trees. If they are so thrifty as to give annual shoots three feet long, you may prune late in spring or early in summer. If the pruning is to be very light and with small shoots, the time will not be very important; but if the trimming is heavy, the above rule is to be carefully observed.

The value of the bean crop is not in its foliage but in its grain. An excessive amount of nitrogen in fertilizers makes straw, but without a proportionate amount of pods. This is more especially true in coarse stable manure, which heats in the soil, causing increased warmth. Finely rotted manures, or nitrated in their concentrated form, are often apparently as helpful to grain production as mineral fertilizers. They undoubtedly make available some mineral plant food in the soil that would otherwise be unavailable. In like manner caustic potash or soda, as ashes or salt, will often change inert nitrogen in the soil to forms in which plants can use it.

An old recipe for making grafting wax, and a good one, is four parts resin, two parts beeswax, and one part tallow. Melt all together in a kettle, over a moderate fire, and when well mixed pour into a vessel of cold water to harden.—When stiff enough to handle grease the hands, and then pull and work the wax until it is white, or amber colored, and of even quality throughout. Apply the wax to the grafts in such a way that the air shall be entirely excluded from all raw surfaces on scion and stock. In cold weather the wax may need warming by working it in the hands, or it may be melted and applied with a brush. For small trees in nurseries, we have used the wax on strips of cloth prepared by simply dipping the strips in melted wax. These, wound around the stock, keep the scion firmly in place.

A Walking Skeleton.

Mr. E. Springer, of Mechanicsburg Pa., writes: "I was afflicted with lung fever and abscess on lungs, and reduced to a walking skeleton. Got a free trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which did me so much good that I got a dollar bottle. After using three bottles found myself once more a man, completely restored to health, with a good appetite and a gain in flesh of 48 pounds." Call at E. James' drug store and get a free trial bottle of this certain cure for all lung diseases. Large bottles one dollar.

ALL FOR NOTHING.

WHY THE DOCTOR WAS DISGUSTED, AND WHAT HE MIGHT HAVE DONE WITHOUT HIM.

"Well, wife," said Dr. E——, as he entered his house, which was situated in a cozy village in central New York, "I have got back from a long and dreary ride away down among the mountains, and all to no purpose whatever. The messenger said the man wouldn't live till morning, when the fact is he had only an ordinary attack of colic. If the simpletons had only had sense enough to put a BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER on his stomach he would have been all right in an hour or two. But some folks are slow to learn," added the old physician, swallowing the cup of steaming tea his wife had just poured for him.

Dr. E—— was right; yet people do learn, even though slowly. The rapidly increasing use of Benson's plaster proves this beyond question, and the good doctors are certain to be saved much of their needless toil. In all diseases capable of being affected by a plaster Benson's acts efficiently and at once. The genuine have the word CAPCINE cut in the centre. Price 25 cents.

CARP PONDS.

SUGGESTIONS AS TO THEIR CONSTRUCTION AND THE CARE OF THE FISH.

There is a deep and growing interest in the culture of the prolific German carp in this country. Suggestions have heretofore been given in these columns regarding the construction of ponds. An eastern exchange offers some points on the same subject that will bear repetition: Ponds may be made by banking or excavating, or both. They need not be fancy, and may be irregular and in any shape that the locality will permit. It takes but a small supply of water to keep a pond of half an acre full. But look out for gravel beds or seams of gravel. There is where you lose your water—through the gravel. By cutting a trench through the gravel and filling with clay you can stop the leakage.—You should have from four to five feet of water in some parts of the pond, but you want more shallow water for feeding and spawning, with plenty of aquatic plants for the fish to feed on. Watercress will serve the purpose extremely well. The black muck bottom or even clay is better than gravel for carp. The greatest difficulty in making ponds is to get rid of the water of branches and ravines that are liable to overflow your pond in times of heavy rains. They should be ditched around the pond. There should be a place for discharge of surplus water a little lower than the top of the bank, well protected by wash boards or stone. You need not be alarmed about carp trying to get out. They are non-migratory, and in times of rain or storm or any disturbance in the water they seek the the bottom.—Make yourself a carp pond, if it be but one rod wide and three or four long, and you will be surprised at the amount of fish you can raise in it by feeding. If you have six sheep on an acre of pasture they grow well, but if you have fifty you will have to feed or they will starve. A limited number of carp will thrive in a pond without feed, but an overstock must be fed. Throw in cabbage leaves, potato peelings, cucumbers, watermelons, or anything that your pig will eat, and you will be surprised to see what good feeders they are and how they grow. They like wheat bread better than anything. If you will always feed at the same place in the pond your fish will soon learn to come there for their feed. Throw in a few pellets of bread that will sink to the bottom, and then some that will float, and your fish will soon learn to come to the surface. Notwithstanding the common belief to the contrary, the carp is a fair game fish and during the summer months he takes to the hook readily and is not choice as to what the bait may be. The carp is omnivorous in his eating, and well suited for domestic culture—eating anything that a pig or a chicken will eat, and requiring teeth to tear it. The carp are nearly if not in every respect the antipode of trout—they do not seek living or running water as trout do. The carp does not grow except in water too warm for trout to live in. The carp's eggs or spawn is deposited in the spring, while the trout spawns late in the fall and winter. The carp spawn is adhesive and hatches on grass, leaves, litter or logs, while the trout spawns on the gravel. We verily believe the culture of this great growing omnivorous feed and wonderfully fecund fish will become as common and much more profitable than poultry throughout this country, and that acreage in water will in the near future prove more profitable with only a fraction of the labor necessary for the culture of the soil.

ORIGIN OF WEIGHTS AND MEASURES

As the Jews had a mystical reverence for seven, and the ancient Welsh and Celts for three, and the Greeks a perfect philosophy constructed out of the harmonies of all sorts of numbers, so the Romans fell back upon a scale of twelve, or more properly upon a scale with a base of six. Accordingly as they divided the pound into twelve unciæ, so they also divided the foot, which was the standard of linear measure, into twelve sections, and called these twelve unciæ too. But how did they get to the inch originally? Rather, how did they get at the pound? for that and not the inch is the unit. There seems to be no precise information. They would divide any unit into twelfths, and a prevailing notion was at one time that the linear unciæ was really the original, and was then transferred as a name to the weight. This, though plausible, is hardly the case. The ounce is literally the twelfth, and thus we see at once the sense of speaking of an ounce of time, an ounce of land or an inch of milk, just as an inch of a man's will or an inch of interest for money on loan. It was always the twelfth of the unit—twelfth of an hour twelfth of a jugerum, that half acre which the two oxen plowed in a day; twelfth of a sextarius or equivalent to our pint; twelfth of the entire hereditas; twelfth of the principal lent on hire when it was money at usury, i. e., over eight per cent. It is accordingly as much of a mistake to say that the primary meaning of the word is a linear, which is to say that it comes straight from the Greek into the Latin and thence on to us. The whole riddle is plain enough when we get to the true origin of the word—a twelfth. Once, indeed, it used to be said that the true origin was that the word meant a thumb-breadth, because its equivalent pollex in linear measure was often used in its place. But this is not the case. Some of the old Latins themselves, moreover, thought it meant literally "the unit;" but even this will not hold beside the proper signification of a twelfth. The pound weight was really never divided by inches or ounces. It was divided by twelfths, by halves, by thirds, by fourths and by sixths. And here again we see what a convenient base a system of twelfths is for division compared with a system of tenths, which could only be divided evenly in two ways, by two and five. For seven ounces they used the literal seven twelfths; for eight ounces they said "two parts," i. e., two thirds; for nine, "wanting a fourth, which with us seems a roundabout way of expressin three-quarters; for ten, "wanting a sixth"; for eleven, "wanting a twelfth."—London Standard.

Thousands Say So.

Mr. T. W. Atkins, Girard, Kan., writes: "I never hesitate to recommend your Electric Bitters to my customers, they give entire satisfaction and are rapid sellers." Electric Bitters are the purest and best medicine known and will positively cure kidney and liver complaints. Purify the blood and regulate the bowels. No family can afford to be without them. They will save hundreds of dollars in doctor bills every year. Sold at 50 cents a bottle by E. James.

AN OLD FARMER'S EXPERIENCE WITH CATTLE.—The farmer wants to know, not so much what is absolutely the best feed, but what is most economical—something good and substantial, and not too expensive, which he can raise on the farm. Corn fodder, when properly cured and stored, makes good feed, but if it is in the field, or long exposed to the weather, it is scarcely worth cutting and shocking, particularly if the weather has been wet. Wheat straw is not very nutritious food for cattle, but as most farmers raise wheat, it is a good plan to have plenty of straw well stacked, to which cattle during winter, may have free access and let them eat what they will. About the best and cheapest food for cattle is good timothy hay, with occasional feeds of corn. Clover may be fed to cattle with good advantage. Turnips and pumpkins, where they can be successfully raised, make good feed for fall and early winter. Potatoes, either raw or cooked, make good feed, and the small ones cannot be used to better advantage than by feeding them to cattle. Potato and apple peelings mixed with bran or meal make good feed for milch cows. Cattle as well as other farm animals appreciate good treatment, and should be treated kindly and even petted.

An Egyptian Custom.

It is stated that the ancient Egyptians when they feasted always had a skeleton at the table with them. This was for the purpose of reminding them that even in the midst of mirth and revelry death was apt to come. Let him come when he will and he is unwelcome. The Egyptians sought to teach that all should prepare for the grim monster and be ready to follow him, let him call when he would. The lesson can well be remembered to-day. All should live prepared to die at any moment, and all should learn now while in the full enjoyment of health and its pleasures that Peruna is the greatest remedy in the world for the diseases to which flesh is heir. It can be procured at any drug store. Ask your druggist for Peruna, the great tonic.

THERE never has been offered the people of Cambria county a medicine so deserving of praise and patronage as McDonald's celebrated Worm Powders. They combine the three most desirable points in any remedy viz; Smallness of dose, easiness to take and effectiveness. They are positively the greatest worm destroyer of the age. Many children suffer continually and finally die, their parents never dreaming that their stomachs are infested and eaten through with worms. Twenty-five cents invested in a box of McDonalds celebrated Worm Powders would have saved the little sufferer's life and given back its rosy cheeks and blooming health. Any case of failure to cause repulsion where worms exist, the money promptly refunded. Sold by E. James, Ebensburg.

THE USE of Iodoform or mercurials in the treatment of catarrh—whether in the form of suppositories or ointments—should be avoided, as they are both injurious and dangerous. Iodoform is easily detected by its offensive odor. The only reliable catarrh remedy on the market to-day is Ely's Cream Balm, being free from all poisonous drugs. It has cured thousands of chronic and acute cases, where all other remedies have failed. A particle is applied into each nostril; no pain; agreeable to use. Price 50 cents; of druggists.

—Never neglect a constipated condition of the bowels, or serious results surely follow, such as piles, impure blood and many chronic complaints. Burdock Blood Bitters is the remedy.

FERTILIZERS OF HOME MANUFACTURE.—There is a continually growing tendency on the part of farmers who are compelled to go beyond the resources of the farm for fertilizing material to procure the crude material and do their own compounding, finding it to produce fully as satisfactory results, and at a much less cost. Even with all the safeguards that experiment stations and state analysis are supposed to throw around the farmer, the use of many of the commercial fertilizers offered for sale is not entirely satisfactory. In conversation with a gentleman who had used large quantities, he remarked that "he had used tons of fertilizers and yet did not believe he was one cent better off for their use."

One fact is certain, that all who have manufactured their own phosphate claim to be much better satisfied with it than with any they can purchase, and at a cost of only about one-half. Or, if farmers prefer, they can purchase those crude materials which contain the elements of plant food and mix in such quantities as the crops to which they are to be applied demand. Bone phosphate can be procured for $1.55 per hundred; sulphate of ammonia for $3.60 per hundred; muriate of potash for $1.23 per hundred; and from these can be obtained the principal elements of plant nutrition. Prof. S. W. Johnson states that in 1884, in Connecticut, super-phosphates were sold at an advance of 42.9 per cent. of the wholesale price of the raw materials. These suggestions are made for the purpose of informing the farmer upon matters upon which he might be in ignorance.—Germantown Telegraph.

It will prevent inflammation and soreness.

D. Langell's Asthma and Catarrh Remedy.

Having struggled 20 years between life and death with ASTHMA or PHTHISIC, treated by eminent physicians and receiving no benefit, I was compelled, during the last five years of my illness to sit on my chair day and night gasping for breath; my sufferings were beyond description. In despair I experimented on myself by compounding roots and herbs and inhaling the medicine thus obtained. I fortunately discovered this WONDERFUL CURE for ASTHMA and CATARRH, warranted to relieve the most stubborn case of ASTHMA IN FIVE MINUTES, so the patient can lie down to rest and sleep comfortably. Any person not fully satisfied after using one-third of a box, can return the remainder to the proprietor and the money will be refunded, or send me your address for a trial package FREE OF CHARGE. Mrs. W. T. Brown, Monroe, Texas, writes: "I suffered with Asthma 30 years. Your Great Remedy completely cured me. I wish all afflicted with Asthma and Catarrh to send for it. Publish this for the benefit of the afflicted." Should your druggist not keep the remedy, I can send it by mail on receipt of price $1.00. For sale by all druggists. Address D.
